#Covid

Are you a European startup impacted by coronavirus?

You can benefit from dedicated grants, loans and other measures. Check out Sifted's multi-country guide to COVID-related support opportunities.

How can blockchain contribute to fight COVID?

-Brussels-based International Association for Trusted Blockchain Applications (INATBA) has joined the World Economic Forum's COVID Action Platform to coordinate multi-stakeholder contributions into the fight to combat the global spread of coronavirus

-Netherlands-based distributed ledger technology (DLT) firm Tymlez has offered its blockchain platform to the Dutch government to "model the medical goods ecosystem through a platform that matches supply and demand".

-Emerge, a blockchain startup based in Toronto, is launching a public safety system app to assist local authorities "to improve safety and cut store wait times by reducing gatherings in tight spaces, reducing the probability of contagion."
